The Employees State Insurance Corporation of India, one of the largest insurers in the world, are collaborating with the Centre for Occupational and Environmental Health, at Maulana Azad Medical College, New Delhi, the Collegium Ramazzini, the European Ramazzini Foundation, and Drexel University, School of Public Health to organize a state-of-the-art three day international conference on the above topic at New Delhi, India from 11 January through 14 January 2009.

The conference hopes to bring together a galaxy of physicians, scientists, academicians and researchers to discuss and deliberate issues of topical importance in one of the most economically active regions of the world. Several young researchers from neighbouring Asian countries are also likely to participate and interact with Collegium Fellows.

All in all it is going to be one of the best academic feasts ever to be held in India in this decade and there are high expectations. The Indian researchers and authorities are looking forward to the conference with a view to getting the best of ideas toward developing dynamic research and practice models of occupational and environmental health to meet the challenge of globalization in the 21st Century.
